FACTICITY AND TRANSCENDENTALITY OF HISTORY

Abstract

Facticity and Transcendentality are essentially connected. They are elements of an original relationship, which is introduced by an analysis of Vico, Kant e Heidegger points of view. These authors pointed out in a very paradigmatic way the practical-theoretical correlation of the two notions. Sharing this theoretical path, the essay shows the concrete way in which transcendental instances appear in existential facticity and in our comprehension of history. There isn't any factum, neither individual facticity, that could be really understood, if we consider it a part from the original dimension of sense. This latter is the condition of possibility of any factum and goes beyond every single knowledge, action and fact.
